The Big Stock of BLANKETS Is Now Ready

Some of them are of the lightest, downiest construction, made of soft, fleecy wool—and some of them are of cotton, thick, firm and heavy, but warm and serviceable and in sizes from crib to a big double bed.

And we always make it a particular point to tell you whether a blanket is all wool, all cotton or part wool and cotton. It is this spirit of standing back of the blankets we sell that has made them a standard in this section of the state—Fordyce blankets last for years.

Learn Much At The Canfield Fair

A Fair Question

What do you get out of the county fair?

A view of a fat lady or a big snake?

An opportunity to show your prowess with a post maul by ringing a bell at the top of a tower?

A kewpie doll or box of candy from the spinning jenny and three shots at a colored boy's head with a baseball?

County fairs were established to promote agriculture and domestic arts and most of them receive public aid for that purpose.

Concerted efforts are being made by extension workers of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges to bring legitimate attractions of the county or neighborhood fair up to the pulling power of the tent shows and midway.

Improvement along that line is already noticeable.

The agricultural and domestic exhibitions are present at every fair, and they offer opportunities to farm folk to gather valuable ideas.

Are you one of those to be led by a "barker"?

Just because the trays of plums, apples and juicy grapes, or full-grown yellow corn cannot get out in front of the tent and shout, that is no reason you cannot put in a pleasant and profitable afternoon with them.

When you go to the Canfield fair next month, direct your steps first to the exhibit tents. Perhaps you grow corn. You may have exhibits there.

At any rate you will find men who have specimens of their best product.

They are likely to be in the neighborhood of their tables waiting for some one to talk to. Stop and chat with one of them. Point to a blue-ribbon ear and ask the man how he produced it, and if he is an ordinary human individual you will see his eyes light up at your interest.

Possessed of a listener, he will tell you how he went into the field the previous year and selected seed ears from the finest hills; how he germinated kernels to see if he had disease-free seed; how he selected the "piece of ground best adapted to growing corn; how he prepared the ground and cultivated it to produce ears of prize-winning perfection.

You probably have ideas of your own, and in a moment or so there is likely to be a lively discussion, in which others growers will join. Each will tell of how he raises corn, or how he would like to raise it. Possibly farmers will arrange to exchange favorite varieties of seed. Lifelong friendships have been established from smaller beginnings.

The prize-potato men and the prize-apple men and the prize-pumpkin men will be equally willing to tell you how they did it. Spend a day in this manner once and the next season you will require no urging. You probably will be an exhibitor.

Cats, sheep and swine exhibits often receive only casual attention. Suppose, instead of glancing into the pens and passing on, you start early and go through with the judges. Size up the animals and see how nearly your appraisal checks up with theirs.

You can get a fair idea of how to judge animals for yourself when you come to make a purchase, and you ought to get new ideas on breeding and animal husbandry.

Women of the family can take the same suggestion when they go through the domestic arts exhibits. New friendships and new ambitions ought to result from conversations over the production of a prize loaf of bread or a fine piece of needlework.

Efforts to make the county fairs more instructive and helpful are bringing results. One state fair will devote $500 to bringing persons from all parts of the state who excel in various domestic arts, such as butter and cheese making, knitting and fancy needlework.

The will of God, forsooth. By caring for the creature According to the truth.

The truth that maketh free today is loving kindness sweet; In thought and word and deed always Be true to all you meet.

Early Astronomical Instruments. The earliest known astronomical instruments of German make have recently been described by Dr. J. Hartmann of Göttingen. They belonged to the philosopher and astronomer, Cardinal Nikolaus of Cusa, who lived from 1401 to 1464, and comprised a "torquetum," for measuring the longitude and latitude of the celestial bodies, an astrolabe and two celestial globes. A note has been found in the cardinal's own handwriting, stating that he purchased three of these instruments in the year 1444, together with 16 astronomical treatises, for the sum of 88 florins. Doctor Hartmann believes that at least two of the instruments were made by one Nikolaus Hyebach of Erfurt, who was born in 1370.—Scientific American.

Honi Soit. Morris Gest said at a Chicago reception:

"These blue-law people are always finding offense where no offense is intended. They remind me of the bookseller."

"Bishop Trevor of England wrote a book some time ago called 'Loose Stones.' The book was highly recommended to me by a priest. Accordingly I wrote to my bookseller and ordered a copy."

"The bookseller sent me his reply next day. He said he had no copy of Trevor's 'Loose Stones' in stock, and he added that if my taste ran to that kind of literature I had better patronize another bookseller in future."

Container for Liquid Oxygen. The increasing use of liquid oxygen in life-saving respiratory apparatus, airplanes and as a mine explosive, has made necessary the development of a container for it of a stronger, more reliable construction than the vacuum-walled glass bulbs used heretofore.

The bureau of standards has designed for this purpose a durable vessel with-out vacuum walls, the contents being protected from heat by a coating of insulating material with which the device is covered.

Smashing Proof. "Mrs. Blueblood brags about her ancestors, but I don't believe they amounted to much—they couldn't even afford to keep servants."

"How do you know that?" "Mrs. Blueblood showed me a set of dishes that she said had been in the family for more than a hundred years."—New York Sun.

Home, Sweet Home. "Does your wife let you carry a latchkey?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton; "the only person who is now likely to keep me from going into my front door is the landlord."

SPRAY WILL SAVE

CELERY FROM BLIGHT Celery blight which causes much loss in the fall may be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture, according to the Ohio experiment station, Wooster.

The spray is used on new seedlings before transplanting and afterward as needed. The diseased parts of the plant should also be destroyed. The leaves must be well covered with the spray in the plant beds if the best results are to be secured.

Bordeaux mixture may be made by dissolving 4 pounds of copper sulphate, 6 pounds of hydrated lime separately, then mix and make solution to 50 gallons with water.

WHEN TO MEND A ROAD The method of highway upkeep that Grant county, Washington, has adopted, might commend itself to other sections of the country as a means of preventing more costly repairs. For every ten miles of road there is a patrolman who, like a railway track walker, maintains a constant inspection. He is responsible for his piece of road and keeps it in condition. The annual cost, according to the Federal Department of Agriculture, is $223 a mile. The cheapest way to men most things is before they get out of order.

DEEDS, NOT DREAMS Deeds, not dreams, are ever The stepping-stones of man, 'Tis realized endeavor That bridges now the span.

By stretching forth a helping hand Now to humanity, Is wisdom that does truly stand For love's fraternity.

The touch-stone of all victory, Uplifting civilization, Are deeds promoting harmony In every relation.

Attending man's advancement To realize the truth, That growth is the development That makes a man, forsooth.

A sympathetic being That feels the holy thrill Of love that is a-seeing Man liveth to fulfill.

The law upholding nature, The will of God, forsooth, By caring for the creature According to the truth.

The truth that maketh free today Is loving kindness sweet; In thought and word and deed always Be true to all you meet.
